Development Ethics and the Alliance Approach to the social management of innovations.

ABSTRACT

Development Ethics is an interdisciplinary field of ethical reflection on the ends and means of development. All development projects, including – but not limited to – projects in agro-economics, innovation processes, social management of innovation (participatory methods), and sustainability, have rich and complicated ethical dimensions. We make an ethical choice when we choose to ignore, rather than explore and seek to understand these ethical dimensions. With this in mind, we are choosing to explore the ethical dimensions of participatory development.
