Political changes faced with climate change : institutionalization of policy innovations

ABSTRACT

This interdisciplinary seminar would bring together the speakers of the plenary conference (if possible), but beyond that, foreign and French researchers, from the whole of Agropolis Montpellier, on the issue of the climate change seen through political variables, in particular policy innovation capacity , and its link with participatory democracy processes. It's an opportunity to bring the Agropolis communities to exchange with political scientists on the subject and debate the processes and contexts that favor or limit these links, in the particular domains of agroecology policies, research policies for agriculture (genetics...), forestry policies, environmental policies.
